A few lines below, dealing with the persons who think that the consequences of this doctrine of fallibilism would undermine religion, Peirce writes that he does not believe that it is incompatible with religion: . Robbers have their loot; murderers their revenge; drunkards their stimulation; but the hypocrite has nothing but the contempt of his neighbors and the judgment of God. And I can't get into that in this sermon, but I'll just refer you to the sermons on Deuteronomy which reminds us how much God overlooked the hardness of heart in Israel even as He was getting to the main point of His salvation. Polanski has his detractors but I cannot help a certain sympathy towards a guy who had to face what had happened to 1950-1975 gorgeous, pregnant wife.
